The Soap Box (10/04/02)

---

If someone like Randy Moss gets pulled over, shouldn't they only post a headline when marijuana isn't found. I mean wouldn't this be more shocking:

MOSS PULLED OVER, POLICE FIND NO POT!

That would be so unbelievable, I'm surprised the Enquirer hasn't run it yet.

Speaking of Randy Moss, that's all I need to see is that fucking guy getting interviewed by Andrea Kramer on ESPN and he starts fucking crying.

Jeeeeezus. Randy Moss fucking crying on TV. Yeah, we all feel bad for you Randy.

Let's all cry for Randy.

You've got it so tough kid. Got a 50+ million dollar contract and all you gotta do is catch a fucking football.

It's funny how things start to turn on guys when they stop playing as well. It's easy to overlook things when a guy catches 100+ balls and scores 20 touchdowns. You start 'short' arming passes, start hearing footsteps, and they don't quite look the other way when you push a traffic cop a block down the street on the hood of your car.

Randy, here's some 31B advice, shut the fuck up and catch the fucking ball.

Nuf said.

The Fighting Sea Monkeys are 0-3-1. What the fuck? This team can't even go winless right. I've decided to cut my losses on some guys. Dropped Keyshawn for Deion Branch.

Keyshawn couldn't find the end zone with GPS.

You know it's going bad when 3 weeks in (pre-injury) you can't trade Kurt Warner for Michael Vick straight-up.

If I could trade places with anyone, I'd have a hard time not picking Tony Hawk. What a life that guy has made for himself. We're about the same age, we started skateboarding about the same time . . . that's about where our lives became a little different.

Tony is basically the Michael Jordan of skateboarding. He makes millions, skating, has a video game named after him, he does movie cameos and basically just kicks it.

Not bad.

You ever walk by, or just catch a part of a conversation, or turn on the radio and just catch a sentence out of context that strikes you funny:

Here's one I caught:

Howard Stern: "Porky's was a cool movie."

I have no idea what they were talking about, but it just struck me funny.

You know a quarterback is wild when you're sitting on your couch and a guy throws an 'out' pattern and you duck.

I feel that way sometimes watching Quincy Carter.

I've come up with a new hangover cure: Eat a Slim Jim before you start drinking and either eat one before you go to bed, or eat one when you wake up.

Something about the grease, settles me down.

Of course, I had a buddy who used to go to the buffets in Vegas and start off with cheese cubes because he said it would 'back him up' and that way he could eat more.

Where else on the web can you get these kind of tips?

Until next time.
