

It's Time to Take Out the Trash!

September 2008

I need to start by saying thank you to Scott for asking me get some things of my chest from time to time.

A once-proud franchise, the Oakland Raiders have become the league's laughingstock under owner Al Davis, who excessively overpays for free agents and changes coaches like most people change underwear. Since making the Super Bowl following the 2002 season, the Raiders have gone an embarrassing 19-62 and had three different coaches which by the time you read this it may be 4 coaches. Davis was once a brilliant mind but now he is a senile old coot who someone needs to smother with a pillow. The stench of death surrounds him and his franchise. The league needs to step in and remove talented young players like JaMarcus Russell and Darren McFadden and give them a real chance to make something of themselves. The Raiders are a plague that continues to mutate and infest the bowels of the bay area. They need to burn down everything associated with the team including McAfee Stadium then shovel it all up, grab a big ol' Hefty Bag and put it on the curb for pickup, because It's time to take out the trash!
